Among the American volunteers to the French army is W. Hall, of Bowling Green, Ky.Kaiser Wilhelm has conferred the decoration of the Iron Cross on three of his sons, who are fighting with the armies at the front.Russian authorities are abolishing previous restrictions against prayer meetings, and Baptists are opening hospitals in Kiev, Odessa and St. Petersburg.The Germans will make their stand to protect Berlin at the river Oder.
The bottled up correspondent with a nose for news ought to have a showing there.Ellison Durant Smith was renominated for the United States Senate from South Carolina over Gov. Cole L. Blease in Tuesday's Democratic primary by a majority of between 18,000 and 20,000, according to partially complete returns.The Japanese attack on Tsing-Tao, the fortified port of the territory of Kiaochow, has failed, and the Japanese are preparing for a siege, according to a cable message received here by Count Von Bernstorff, German ambassador at Peking.Special trains with sleeping accommodations will leave Berlin each day for Holland as long as they are required by Americans. The ordinary railway service in Germany is being resumed and trains soon will be running in all directions.Paul Fuller, of New York, who, it is predicted, probably will be the next ambassador to Mexico, reported to President Wilson that there was little danger of a conflict between Villa and Carranza, and that prospects for continued peace in Mexico were bright.Prince Frederick William, of Lippe, not the Kaiser's son of the same name, was killed in the battle of Liege. According to another official announcement made here in Berlin, Lieut. Gen. Prince Frederick of Sax-Meiningen, was killed by a shell before Namur, August 23.The French ministry, headed by Premier Rene Viviani, resigned Wednesday night. Another cabinet was formed immediately. He said that he and his colleagues had concluded that in the circumstances through which the country was passing the ministry should have a wider scope and comprise the best men in all the republican group. The Premier again heads the cabinet.The Russians are within 150 miles of Berlin and steadily advancing.
The Germans are within 150 miles of Paris, but the flower of the French and English armies, strongly fortified a chosen line, is awaiting the next move. In London it is claimed everything is now ready to crush Germany between hammer and anvil.
In the meantime Serbia is whipping Austria.Because the family bread winners have returned to Europe to fight in the present war, the poor directors of Western Pennsylvania counties are being besieged with applications for aid from destitute foreign families. In the coal and coke region the task of providing the deserted families with food is becoming acute.
The foreign population is large in the coal and coke region.

SANS CLOTHES, SANS DIGNITY

Paul's Views Concerning Modest Dress of Women Were Imbibed in Childhood.

The Tarsians were celebrated for the extremely modest dress of their women, who were always deeply veiled when they went abroad, remarks the Christian Herald. "As Tarsian ladies walked in the streets you could not see any part either of their faces or of their whole person, nor could they themselves see anything of their path." In this respect they were different from the women of other cities which had been more thoroughly Hellenized. Those early impressions of Paul's childhood doubtless account in part for Paul's strict rules as laid down to the Corinthians about the veiling of their women. "Every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered, dishonoreth her head." In another place he says, "The woman ought to have authority upon her head." This should be translated, we are told, "The woman who has a veil on her head wears authority on her head." Being interpreted, this signifies that "in oriental lands the veil is the power and the honor and dignity of the woman; with the veil on her head she can go anywhere in security and profound respect; she is not seen. It is the mark of thoroughly bad manners to observe a veiled woman in the street. . . . A woman's authority and dignity vanish along with the all-covering veil that she discards. That is the oriental view which Paul learned in Tarsus."

BY THE POOL OF THE LOTUS

Thoughts of inmates of the Harem Not Always Pleasant, Despite Surroundings of Beauty.

The best of all in this embroidery of running water was the square pool that lay in the midst of the zenana, for the bottom of it was carved into the image of a huge and many-petaled lotus flower, all of one block of white marble without flaw or stain, and the petals seemed as if when the clear crystal passed flowing over them. And at each corner of the lotus, completing the square, were triangular panels of delicate water flowers, and through the water the carnation and the agate and the Jasper of which they were fashioned shone strangely with vivid gleams.

All around the pool of the lotus used to sit the flowers of Shah Jehan's garden of girls, and there is no pool on earth that has reflected the image of such beauty. Often did the pearl lily, the chief flower and favorite of the harem, sit there with unsandaled feet, waiting for the summons of her lord, and sometimes a cloud would pass over the image of her face reflected there when she considered that soon her loveliness would pass and her beauty be marred by the wrinkles of the shriveling years, and desire would fail, and long after her lips had crumbled into dust and her soft limbs had been laid underground for the worm and the red ant to fatten upon, the water that flowed there would be ever renewed and know not the horror of age.—From "Dewan-i-Khas" (the Hall of Private Audience), by E. P. Benson in the Century.

Painting "Old Hickory."

No American can stand before the portrait of Andrew Jackson by Thomas Sully and look upon that tall and wiry frame without feeling that here is presented at a glance the strength and vigor of "Old Hickory." The portrait is very familiar, owing to many reproductions, but the visitor is generally surprised to discover that Jackson had blue eyes and sandy hair. His voice and action had a peculiarly martial air to one English writer, who further said that he seemed to be a "human gamecock." Yet he could also see a lofty ideal of honor in the deep eyes overhung by bushy gray eyebrows, the ridgy lines of the cheeks and forehead, and the white hair obstinately brushed back. Jackson was a popular subject, as was also Chief Justice Marshall, and again John Randolph of Roanoke, strong and rugged in character, in which the artist tried to find trace of his ancestor, Pocahontas.—National Magazine.

Avalanches Made to Order.

By means of electric mines placed deep in the congealed neve mantling the crests of the Swiss Alps avalanches are being manufactured to order for the benefit of moving picture photographers and others who find the sport attractive enough to pay the prices charged. The mines are connected by cable with a magneto in the valley, and when all is ready a push of the control lever fulminates a large quantity of gunpowder up on the side of the mountain and down comes the artificial avalanche with all the terrifying rush and roar of a natural landslide.—Electrical World.

She Wanted Mourners.

A telegram from Paris tells how Mlle. Virginie Hey, an old woman of Avignon, lived a lonely life, but was followed to the grave by hundreds of mourners. She lived to be seventy-nine. Each time a bright 50-centime piece came into her possession she placed it in a special box. When she died she had saved about 800 of the coins, and in her will she gave instructions that one of them should be given to each person who followed her coffin to the grave. She also left $20 to the municipal band, so that it would play funeral marches at the

Old Lady's Sage Advice.

Knoxville, Tenn. — Mrs. Mamie Towe, of 102 W. Main street, this city, says: "If you had seen me before I began to take Cardui, you would not think I was the same person. Six doctors failed to do me any good, and my friends thought I would die. I could hardly get out of bed or walk a step. At last an old lady advised me to take Cardui, and now I can go most anywhere." All ailing women need Cardui, as a gentle, refreshing tonic, especially adapted to their peculiar ailments. It is a reliable, vegetable remedy, successfully used for over 50 years. You ought to try it.

THE SEPTEMBER AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

In the September American Magazine Jerome D. Travers, four times amateur golf champion of the United States, writes the second article in his series of four articles on golf. The present article is entitled "The Winning Shot," and it shows that the putter is far and away the most important golf stick, and he tells how to use it. These articles by Travers are just as interesting to non-golf-players as to the players because they are filled with dramatic stories of exciting games participate in by great players. As a matter of interest, there are in the United States to-day about 800,000 golf players.

In the same issue Edna Ferber writes another Emma McChesney story entitled "The Self-Starter" in which Emma McChesney's son, Jack, starts out in the advertising business on a large scale.

Owen Davis, who has written and produced 150 melodramas of the "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model" variety, writes a most interesting article entitled "Why I Quit Writing Melodramas."

George Fitch writes a comic piece about village bands. Ray Stannard Baker writes another interesting letter in his new series called "Seeing America." Number 6606, a convict in a western penitentiary, writes a remarkable story entitled "Death Cell Visions," in which he tells how it feels to be under death sentence—he himself having been in that predicament at one time. A contributor who has been married twenty-five years writes "A Husband's Story," in which he relates many of the experiences he and his wife had in bringing up their children.

Incendiary Rabbit.

A Walla Walla man is charged with endeavoring to annihilate a rabbit colony with the aid of a pint of kerosene and a lucifer match. A rabbit was soaked in the liquid and touched off with a match. Whereupon, with a beautiful understanding of the fitness of things, the blazing creature burrowed into the nearest haystack, while thousands of amused rabbits sat around and watched the fun. No insurance.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
